Introduction

Energy Assets Pipelines Limited is an Independent Gas Transporter (IGT) operating local gas distribution networks throughout the United Kingdom. This statement outlines our obligations to publish the principles and methods used to determine gas transportation charges, pursuant to Standard Condition 4 of our Gas Transporter Licence.

Energy Assets Pipelines is not obligated to publish charges for any Ancillary services that we may provide however we will seek to recover these costs from Registered System Users.

Gas Transportation Charging Methodology

Ofgem determine the amounts an IGT may charge to transport gas through its network and all Energy Assets Pipelines Supply Points will be charged under Relative Price Control (RPC) arrangements.

Energy Assets Pipelines methodology of calculating transportation charges is the method currently set out by Ofgem for determining the maximum amounts allowable under Relative Price Control (RPC).

Information relating to the general principles and methodology of Relative Price Control can be located on the OFGEM website by following the links below:

Ancillary Charges

The following charges are not regulated by any of Energy Assets Pipelines Licence Conditions, and as such not subject to Ofgem approval

Estimated Opening Reads – Under the Independent Gas Transporters' Uniform Network Code (IGT UNC) section E, it is the Registered System User responsibility to provide the Pipeline Operator with a reading on confirmation for a proposed supply point.

If the Registered System User fails to provide a valid Opening Meter Reading in pursuant to our Network Code, Energy Assets Pipelines will provide an estimated opening meter reading. The charge for this service is £15 per read.

Must Reads – Under the IGT UNC section E, each Pipeline User should provide cyclic meter readings, should the Pipeline User fail to provide meter readings in pursuant to our Network Code, Energy Assets Pipelines will use reasonable endeavours to obtain a Meter Reading. The charge for this service is £45 per read.
